Buffalo History 101

Erastus H. Bassett, taught a few months school in Buffalo in the winter of 1836-'37, being the first in the place. Mr. Bassett was engaged in the mercantile business, but trade not being brisk gave him leisure to teach the few present the common branches of an English education. In 1865 a frame school-house, two stories high, was erected at a cost of $7,000. This was the old Kof P hall that was torn down, corner of Jefferson and 3rd.

SENIOR MOMENTS

I had a little scare a few weeks ago. When Cheryl came to deliver my Senior meal, she was unable to wake me. I was taken by ambulance to the hospital, where they could find nothing wrong. I had no memory of how I got there, but am doing fine now. Thank you to Cheryl, the BVFD and ambulance for taking care of me. I am keeping the hospital bracelet on my wrist to help if this happens again. I am still determined to get some of these weeds pulled before the first frost.

Call me if you would like to visit me or my animals. 563-349-8068

Buckaroo News

This past weekend (10-11 September) Ricky Bob and I participated in the Historic Marbold Farmstead Heritage Festival near Greenview IL. Both Saturday and Sunday featured great programs, music, craftsmen, vendors, antiques, tractors and engines, tours and Civil War reenactors. There were many booths set up on the south lawn where you had a chance to buy some great handcrafted items: quilts, wood bowls, candles, cutlery, goat milk soap, photographic framed art and more. We watched a blacksmith pounding iron, a shingle maker create shingles the old-fashioned way, a chair caner repairing a chair seat and rug maker, as us Civil War reenactors visited and performed demonstrations about horses, guns, and camp life for the spectators. Additionally, there was great food and music for all to enjoy. This was my first time at this event, and I think I shall return. Everyone is so nice.

Kathryn Harris, retired library services director of the Abraham Lincoln Presidential Library and Museum, brought history to life as she portrayed Harriet Tubman, a former slave who was instrumental in helping 300 slaves escape into freedom in the north via the underground railroad.

As caterpillars, Monarchs feed on the leaves of milkweed.

Milkweed produces glycoside toxins to deter animals from eating them.

As they feed, monarch caterpillars store up the toxins in their body, making them taste bad. This will in turn deter their predators from eating them. The toxins remain in their system even after metamorphosis, protecting them as adult butterflies as well. As adults, monarchs feed on nectar from a wide range of blooming native plants, including milkweed.
